

Apparently Japan's Leaders Don't Want to Take Full Responsibility of Ruling

By RUSSELL BRINES
(For Dewitt MacKenzie)

Tokyo—Are American policies on Japan too contradictory to be workable without basic alterations? This question is being asked seriously in Tokyo. The occupation has reached a fundamental log jam. Efforts are being speeded to stand Japan on her own economic feet—a basic occupation policy for more than two years. The reason is unchanged: Japan should be self-supporting instead of remaining a $400,000,000 a year charge on American charity.

Can this be done parallel with continued reforms?

"Not entirely" is the partial answer already given by American business men enlisted as economic experts.

They virtually have scrapped detailed plans to decentralize Japanese industry which General MacArthur has said was so tightly interwoven that it actually was "a form of socialism x x x in private hands."

Some other reforms also have been lessened or altered on grounds that economic recovery has priority. Now there is considerable discussion that the purge of wartime officials may be eased to restore industry's "brains" to active influence.

Many other reforms continue in effect, however, with little prospect of alteration. They range from redistribution of land to the new constitution.

These reforms have mingled with consistent allied headquarters teaching to form the so-called "democratic base" of modern Japan. Democracy nevertheless sits only lightly on the Japanese. They are more prone to capitalize on its catchwords for their own advantage than to study it thoroughly.

Are Democratic methods sufficient to insure adequate recovery on the timetable now demanded by Washington?

The answer is at least a partial "no."

American military government officials frequently have had to follow practices contradicting their democratic teachings to keep the country going.

Vital foodstuffs, for instance, have been diverted to government channels only by the undemocratic threat of American retaliation if farmers failed to cooperate.

In the whole, however, the effort to reach a compromise between what the Japanese call "demokrassie" and recovery. The Japanese government retains the outward appearance of independence. Japanese politicians now take credit for allied policies which appear popular. They openly blame headquarters for unpopular ones.

One result is what headquarters call an "active conspiracy" among capital, labor and government leaders to continue economic practices which all recognize as delaying national recovery.

American officials complain that the Japanese will continue this sabotage until faced with stronger pressure. A recent series of warnings went unheeded.

General MacArthur seemed to herald something stronger last December. He told the Japanese people then that economic stabilization would mean "temporary surrender of some of the privileges and immunities inherent in a free society."

So far nothing has happened.

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

DISTRIBUTED BY GREENBERG PUBLISHERS
DISTRIBUTED BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

The Story: Roger the Lodger who lives with Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, proves more than a paying guest. It is wartime and Roger is a sergeant seeking appointment for officer training. Roger entertains high ranking officers, including a general, a major and a colonel, using up the ration points of the Major and Mrs. Drummond to Yellowstone in the Roberts' car. So far Roger has broken the speedometer and a muffler, lost a hub cap, allowed two thieves to be stolen, locked the keys in the car and has just broken into the car by smashing a window.

We arrived at Old Faithful just in time to see the geyser erupting into the ground; a few abortive hiccups and nothing was left except run-off water trickling over the mineral deposits, and crowds of people walking away from the scene.

"Never mind," Roger said. "I spouts frequently. I'll ask the Ranger when it'll shoot again. We'll have time to register and go to our rooms."

"This is the berries," Major Drummond commented finding us assigned to the third floor from facing the geyser. "Grandstand seats," he said to the bellboy. "Yes, sir. Dining room closes at eight."

"That means we'll likely miss the next explosion," Roger said. "They happen approximately every hour, but we'll catch the one about nine."

"Floodlighted tonight," Major said. "And an natural in the morning."

Millions of people have seen it just that way, but they weren't with Roger.

We were on the balcony before dinner when Roger strutted to the rail stuck a cigar in his mouth, and drew a match folder from his watch pocket. He lit the cigar and in an airy gesture tossed the match folder over the balcony railing. A wave of panic swept the group well being from his face. He went through every pocket several times in rapid frenzy. He slapped his breast pocket. Felt carefully in his watch pocket, sneaking up on it like a man touching a sore into his pants pockets. Began all over again.

He began to look like a frenzied chicken locked out of the roost at night and crazily running from post to post.

The feeling is growing here that a sharp crackdown is necessary in virtually every activity—including politics—that is linked with recovery.

Some observers expect a move in that direction when Joseph M. Dodge, MacArthur's new economic adviser, makes his first report.

Most Japanese would prefer to be told explicitly what to do—just as they have been told for so many generations.

MacArthur has attempted a thorough much of the occupation to get Japanese leaders to assume responsibility. They have ducked it. Now democracy may have to yield temporarily to practicality.

Italy Ready to Sign Alliance

By The Associated Press

Italy's Foreign Minister, Count Carlo Sforza, visits the U. S. state department today to announce his country's readiness to join other Western nations in a tight defensive alliance.

Sforza reached Washington last night well ahead of the parade of nine — and possibly 11 — other foreign ministers converging on the United States to sign the North Atlantic defense treaty April 4.

The official business is scheduled to get underway Saturday when the foreign ministers meet in a secret session intended to smooth out details leading up to the signing on Monday.

Britain's Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, on route to the U. S. to sign the pact, is expected to ask the American government for a precise statement of its views concerning a Mediterranean defense treaty, linked to the North Atlantic Alliance.

Informants aboard the liner Queen Mary said Bevin has held several conferences, presumably on the Mediterranean subject, with Belgium's Premier Spaak, Holland's Minister D. U. Stikker and Premier Joseph Bech of Luxembourg.

State department experts hurried final work on plans for rearming the North Atlantic allies. The state department reported conversations with the budget bureau to determine a specific figure for arming the pact members and other friendly nations.

A draft agreement on an armistice between Israel and Trans-Jordan has been approved at Rhodes by delegations of the two nations, and both parties prepared to submit the draft to their respective governments.

Informants said the way was paved by a face-saving agreement for reduction of forces in the Akaba area, southern borderland of the two nations near the Red sea. In London Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Christopher P.

come from people who side with Babich and think she should do everything possible to help him.

Babich's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fabian Babich, said they also received telephone calls and letters from persons offering financial aid or advice on Babich's defense during his trial, expected to start next month.

Babich's younger brother, Victor, said he was keeping a list of the names of the persons offering help.

Babich's bride has promised that she will stand by him even though he killed her sister. They had their last embrace yesterday. Henceforth they will face each other across a speaking panel.

The youth was under 24-hour guard today in the Milwaukee county jail to prevent any attempt at suicide.

The alert was ordered after Babich and his attorney, Arthur Richter, former dean of the Marquette University Law school, made a surprise appearance in the county circuit court to appeal a lower court decision refusing him bail. They were unsuccessful.

Babich made a personal plea, arising to tell of his past good record, his habits, financial independence and desire to be with Kathleen in this time of trouble.

He reiterated that the killing occurred accidentally as he struggled with Patricia for possession of the gun. But he admitted that his finger was on the trigger and then the gun discharged twice, both bullets striking her in the head.

HE made his statements without oath so as not to jeopardize himself.

Babich and Kathleen embraced and talked animatedly earlier yesterday when the youth was arraigned in district court where his first request for bail was denied. Afterwards, Kathleen told news-men:

"Patricia was a little devil and liked to tease. I'm going to get a job if Milton goes to prison and work until he gets out. But I don't believe he will be convicted."

Wisconsin City Fighting to Save Youths

By ROBERT MUSEL

Milwaukee, March 29 (UP)—Milwaukee regarded itself as a quiet conservative city until the orgies in the sixth ward — sex and marijuana parties of white and Negro teenagers — shocked it into action against juvenile delinquency.

Now it knows that no city is safe from a postwar problem so widespread that juvenile authorities have been demanding that it be coordinated from Washington on a national scale.

For fresh in its headlines is the teenage tragedy of Milton Babich, 19-year-old student who killed 16-year-old Patricia Birmingham to hide the fact that her sister Kathleen, 17, was pregnant because of him.

And strewn on its police records in the five months between these two unwelcome sensations are many other sex and drinking offenses involving minors.

Although its record for all its notoriety is better than that of most American cities, Milwaukee knows that it faces a fight, one that must continue for years, and it is meeting it with traditional thoroughness.

Already the Catholic archdiocese has stepped out ahead of the rest of the country with unprecedented rules of behavior for the boys and girls who attend dances at its 15

DOROTHY DIX Can't Have Cake and Eat It

Dear Miss Dix: I am married to a man who never in our 21 years of married life has let me want for anything. I love him and he loves me. But here is the fly in the ointment. He never wants to take me stepping out at nights. His business keeps him outdoors. He comes home at night, eats one of my good dinners, watches the television while I do the dishes, and then goes to sleep. That is his only fault.

Now I want to go out in the evenings to visit our friends, or go to places of amusement; but he only wants to go to sleep. He tells me to go out during the day and amuse myself, but that isn't what I want. I want him to go around with other husbands do their wives.

Don't you think that I am entitled to some more diversion than just being a cook and a baby-sitter.

LONESOME MARY

Answer: Alas Mary, we can't have our cake and eat it too, and there come times in life when all of us have to decide between two things that we can't have both. And this happens often in marriage than it does anywhere else. Indeed, the greatest drawback to marriage is that husbands can't be playboys and money grubbers at the same time, and that no woman can be glamorous when she is wrestling with a teething baby.

This limitation on human activities is one of the common gripes of women and explains why so many marriages that started off with every prospect of happiness end so often in the divorce court. Take your case as an illustration of this, Mary.

You have a fine husband who works himself to the bone to provide you with luxuries, but it isn't enough that he gives you mink coats and diamonds. You want the poor tired man, who is ready to drop with fatigue, to put on his glad rags and take you forth to dance and have a good time.

It is a common complaint among wives that their husbands don't take them out to places of amusement or evenings, or that their husbands don't talk at home, or that their husbands go to sleep in their chairs after dinner, which the wives attribute to neglect, but which is really physical exhaustion. But not once in a coon's age do you ever hear of a wife saying to her husband: "Let's live simpler so you won't have to work so hard, and will have time to relax."

Think it over and maybe you will see why your husband doesn't want to go gadding at night.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am an orchestra leader in a band of the type that plays for weddings, and I am more and more impressed by the cruel folly of the custom that makes people who can't afford it give their daughters show weddings that practically bankrupt them, for it generally means digging in the reserve that has been laid away for later years and that represents the struggle of half a lifetime.

It makes me wonder why the parents of both bride and groom do not divide the expenses equally, or else have the bills for the wedding paid out of the money that is usually given the bride couple. It certainly would give Ma and Pa a break.

ONLOOKER

Answer: I fully agree with you that it is the height of folly for a family to impoverish itself to give a girl a swanky wedding, but I doubt if anything on earth could make the average girl willing to forego that promenade up the church aisle in white satin and orange blossoms.

For it would be wrecking the dreams of a life. Every sane she was a baby she has planned every detail of her wedding. She knows just how long her bridal veil is going to be, how many ushers will attend what the bridesmaids will wear, and she would rather die or be an old maid than not to have all the flummery that belongs to the occasion.

But it is awfully hard on poor Mom and Pop.

Dear Miss Dix: After 38 years of experimenting, my wife and I have evolved this code of conduct for husbands and wives: (a) never get mad at the same time, (b) respect the other one's opinion. She or he could be right, (c) if either one thinks a thing is so, that's good enough. Let it ride, (d) Don't do the things you would not sanction if someone else did them.

R. G.
Answer: Good. I'll bet no husband and wife who follow these rules will ever get within a thousand miles of the divorce court.

Heavy Rains Send Ouachita River Up

Little Rock, March 29 (AP)—The easy-to-flood Ouachita river is on the rampage again.

Recent heavy rains have sent the Ouachita surging above flood level in south Arkansas, inundating some lowlands along its banks.

The U. S. Weather Bureau at Little Rock said the crest of the flooded river will be reached tomorrow at Camden and also warned that some areas near that city could expect flood waters.

The Ouachita is expected to reach 32 feet, which is five feet above flood stage, the weather bureau said.

Other rivers in Arkansas are full, but there is little danger of flooding, the weather bureau added.

Clear skies were forecast for today and thundershowers are expected Wednesday. However, the additional rainfall is not expected to put any further strain on rivers.

Ex-Arkansas Minister Did Not Get Wish

Houston, March 29 (AP)—Dr. Paul Quillian, pastor of the world's largest Methodist congregation, did not live to "spend the next 10 years of his life teaching young preachers."

Dr. Quillian, 53, died of a heart ailment about 5 p. m. yesterday. His death followed by only a few hours an announcement that Dr. Keith Pope had been appointed to succeed him as pastor of the First Methodist church, Dr. Quillian resigned, effective June 15. He said he was going to teach in Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist university in Dallas.

He was ordained a minister in 1923. Before coming here in 1937, he held pastorates at Camden, Ark.; Little Rock, Ark., and Oklahoma City.

During his pastorate the Houston church grew to be the largest within the denomination.

Dr. Quillian had a heart ailment. He suffered his first attack last year at Amsterdam, Holland, where he was a delegate to the First Assembly of the World Council of Churches.

Construction of the New York State capitol building at Albany began in 1867 but wasn't actually finished until 1879.

The services begin at 7:30 each evening, preceded by a time of prayer and a ten minute Hammond Organ prelude. The public is invited to attend this revival regularly and hear this man "with a message for men."

Texarkana, March 29 (AP)—Some employees of the Ideal Baking company here were on strike today. They had established a picket line in front of the company plant.

Strikers said the walkout was for union recognition and that wages would be considered later. They said 10 of the 13 employees had joined in the strike.

John Simmons, representative of the Bakery and Confectionary Workers International Union (AFL), said Manager John Garvey would not agree to an election on union representation among employees.

While not specifically commenting on his attitude toward a union, Garvey said management was glad to discuss any matters with employees, either individually or collectively. He said only "a few" employees were striking.

Paulette Goddard May File Suit for Divorce

Hollywood, March 29 (AP)—Paulette Goddard has not decided whether to file suit for divorce from Astar Burgess Meredith in California or Mexico.

But the pert, brunette actress confirmed yesterday Burgess' announcement in New York last week that they have parted.

Miss Goddard said she has requested from him a consent decree. As soon as she finishes a movie this week, she added, she plans to fly to New York to talk things over with Burgess.

This will be the actress' third divorce. She divorced Edgar James, lumberman, in the early 30s and Charlie Chaplin in 1942. She married Meredith in 1944.

Princess Fawzia, sister of Egypt's King Farouk, was married today to a wealthy Egyptian, but court circles said she did not take part in the wedding ceremony.

A cabinet announcement said the princess was joined in marriage to Maj. Ismail Sherine Bey "under God's bounty and in consecration of his holy guidance, as well as through the kindness of the great King Farouk."

The cabinet wished the couple all happiness, but gave no details of the ceremony.

However, authoritative court sources said the usual procedure for Moslem marriages was followed, with a proxy appearing for the bride.

King Farouk stood proxy for Princess Fawzia at the ceremony, these sources said, then gave a luncheon for his stender, almond-eyed sister and her 31-year-old husband. Sherine is press officer for the Egyptian cabinet.

It was understood that the wedding was private, with only members of the royal family, close friends and palace officials present. Even the diplomatic corps was not invited.

The newlyweds are expected to live at Maadi garden, a Cairo suburb.

Princess Fawzia, one of the world's most beautiful women, was divorced from the Shah of Iran last November after she failed to bear him an heir to the throne.

Sherine comes from an aristocratic family and his sister, Princess Mehivche, is married to Prince Said Toussou. His mother, the late Princess Amina Bahrouz Fadel, was killed in an air crash in Italy two years ago.

Coal Miners Return to Work

Pittsburgh, March 28. — (UP)—Production resumed in the nation's coal mines today as John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers returned to work at the end of a two-week memorial shutdown.

The miners were jubilant as they began blasting off coal for the first time since Lewis ordered all mines east of the Mississippi closed March 14. But operators and miners alike feared a "war of nerves" for the next 90 days when the union opens its fight for new concessions from the industry.

One miner at Harwick, Pa., spoke for many last night when he dusted off his safety helmet and said, "I'm going to get in every day I can, because I think we'll be back out again."

The mine holiday was widely viewed as the opening salvo to the some 4,500 fans in an intra-squad game in Memorial stadium at Little Rock Saturday night.

The Reds beat the Whites, 13-0, but no one in the stands gave a hang about the score. They were interested in the way the Razorbacks as a whole and their new attack looked. And they thought it looked pretty good, despite the handicaps of a wet field and a slippery ball.

Especially pleasing were the performances of Leon (Muscles) Campbell, the veteran fullback, and one of his Red running mates, Quarterback Jim Rinehart.

Campbell made the T look as though it were made to order for him. He shot through the line and weaved through a broken field frequently for long gains and chipped in some powerful short plunges.

One of his stabs at the line resulted in a touchdown.

Rinehart, who'll be a sophomore next fall, was the smoothest of the T handlers.

Other backs who stood out on offense included Tracy Scott, a brother of the great Clyde, who finished his eligibility last year.

Both teams averaged around 40 yards punting, with the Whites' Louie Schaefer doing the best botting.

A flock of linemen showed up well, but probably the best was Theron Roberts, the veteran guard who seemed to be everywhere at the right time.

A second squad game, to be played in Fayetteville Friday, will bring down the curtain on the spring drills.

Fayetteville, March 28 (P). — Arkansas Razorbacks will wind up their spring football training this week. Their principal task will be to polish further a new T formation which already is better than average.
